THE 1940'S RADIO HOUR IS A wonderfully interactive and delightful show that is full of marvelous singers, great comedy, and jazzed up choreography.

This production invites the audience to truly experience the interesting development of a radio show, complete with complex harmonies, hilarious ads, and sound effects.

From the moment you sit down in the theater, you are transported into a different time.

The set is a very open layout so that it is easy to watch all of the action going on throughout the station no matter where the characters are.

The costumes are fresh and clean cut showing just how vibrant and stylish the 40s were.

The sound is bold and brassy made complete with a live band.

Gavin Carnahan, a freshman musical theater major who plays the role of B.J. Gibson, ensures that it is an entertaining show.

"The music is absolutely phenomenal for this show," said Carnahan. "There are so many funny parts in the show too. There are some comedy routines that'll have you breaking your ribs, they're just that great."

Unfortunately, there are definitely quite a few times where several lines of dialogue and singing are lost, sometimes due to the slightly overbearing sound of the band and other times when there were technical difficulties with the microphones. It did not take away from the musicianship of the cast.

With the ballad's jazzy sound, this show's music is timeless and beautifully executed. The vocals range from raw and bubbly to deep and velvety smooth. It is a real treat to soak in all the various performances.

There is a feeling of nostalgia throughout the whole musical.

Keeping the Coastal community safe

On Wednesday, November 4, a Coastal Carolina student was shot and killed near campus forcing students to stay indoors.

Craig Gerard Gray Jr., a 21 year old computer sciences major, passed away after a shooting at the University Suites townhome complex on Technology Boulevard.

Although college campus shootings have been making media headlines more frequently across the nation, Captain Thomas Mezzapelle of the Coastal Carolina University Police Department said he wants to ensure students that they are always watching.

"We do everything we can," said Mezzapelle. "We have our own police department here on campus. The police department has teams that are out on patrol all day, every day, twenty four hours a day, seven days a week, three hundred sixty five days a year."

There is a training program in place for all the faculty, staff, and workers on campus that teaches them what to do if there is ever an incident with an active shooter.

Mezzapelle said that the department depends on the faculty and staff to keep the students safe when officers are not around.

"We do look to our faculty and staff especially to be the ones in charge in the very moment something happens because very rarely does an event like that actually happen with a police officer right there," said Mezzapelle.

There are different forms of contact the university will make if students safety is ever in jeopardy.

If there is a threat on campus, the police department will use the CCU Alert as their primary method of getting information out.

Mezzapelle said that it is important to listen to the alert and follow the directions.

"If an alert goes out, we need everyone to follow what the alert says," said Mezzapelle. "If the alert says 'stay in place,' that doesn't mean go outside and wander around in between buildings and talk to your friends. It means really stay in place. There's a reason we're asking you to do that."

The university is in the process of building an outdoor notification system that will alert those on campus that do not have access to CCU Alert, Twitter,

On October 24, 2015, Coastal Carolina Running Back De'Angelo "Hop" Henderson scored a touchdown for the twenty first consecutive game in his collegiate career at Coastal, breaking the NCAA FCS record in that category.

"It was good to get it out of the way," said Henderson. "Everyone was talking about it all week. Whether it was fans, teammates, coaches, it was always a topic of conversation and I'm glad I was able to accomplish it early and continue to play ball."

Prior to his now historic career at Coastal Carolina, De'Angelo Henderson was a star running back at Summerville High School. His senior year, he led the state of South Carolina in rushing, running for 2,345 yards. The South Carolina

EDITOR'S NOTE

Be thankful

Samantha Bergold
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Be thankful for everything you have. It is so easy to get stressed out and be unhappy around this time of year. With finals only a couple of weeks away, it is easy to get dragged down with everything that needs to be accomplished.

I have a challenge for you. Wake up each day and appreciate what you are thankful for. That minute of appreciating something in your life could change how you feel for the rest of the day.

The other day, I was in CINO waiting in line. I started to feel really hot, dizzy, and almost passed out. The cashier noticed this and proceeded to help me until I felt better. The manager even checked on me all throughout my meal. I am so thankful for these two women. It may not seem as a big deal, but having two strangers sincerely care about my well being meant so much.

The past couple of days, I have been waking up and thinking about what I am thankful for. Each day that I do this, I feel incredibly happier and more positive about the day.

Be thankful that you get to take finals. Not everyone has the opportunity to pursue a higher education. We are lucky and blessed to get to go to a university as great as Coastal.

Enjoy your two weeks of school before Thanksgiving instead of wishing it is over. Enjoy every minute because one day you will wish you were back at Coastal.

Thank you for picking up The Chanticleer. I am thankful for all our awesome readers and my amazing staff who makes the paper great week after week.

Changing lives one bike at a time

Kara Thomas
ASSISTANT EDITOR

A SENIOR AT COASTAL IS HELPING struggling families and people in need with bicycles.

Last spring AJ Agresta came up with the idea to donate bicycles to Africa to help make a difference. He did this by founding the organization Bikes for the World.

Bikes for the World is a nonprofit organization and a volunteer network.

They collect thousands of used bicycles, bike parts, and tools. They then deliver them to developing countries.

People can donate to this organization at the host collections all across the country.

So far the organization has donated 109,352 bicycles.

Agresta is hoping to increase the number and make an even greater difference for the people in Africa.

"Out of the three different organizations I was looking at, I thought Bikes for the World was the best organization to partner up with," said Agresta.

Agresta got inspired to do this based on the documentary Don't Panic by Hans Rolling.

"In the documentary he visits a part of Africa that's very poor and meets a family of eight," said Agresta. "The husband of this family has to wake up at four in the morning to walk miles for a gallon of water. While sitting in this class it kind of dawned on me that I was more than capable of rallying up a bunch of bicycles and sending them to Africa."

This is Agresta's third year at Coastal and he has been involved with a lot of different things on campus.

He was one of the founding fathers of the PKA Fraternity on campus and was the campaign manager for Dylan Fender, former SGA president.

Agresta said that working with Bikes for the World is what he is meant to do.

"I felt like something came over me," said Agresta. "I had a lot of thoughts in my head and I was almost brought to tears. It started as a dream, but now it's reality. It's amazing to be able to make a difference."

He thought about the process and how to collect bikes throughout the summer. Dylan Fender was one of the people who helped him develop a plan.

The organization will hold a bike collection on November 14 in the Kroger parking lot on Carolina Forest Boulevard.

Coastal expansion underway

Katie Estabrook
REPORTER

Plans for mandatory expansion are underway for Coastal Carolina University after accepting an invitation into the SunBelt Conference in early September 2015.

Dr. David DeCenzo, President of Coastal Carolina University, explained what has to happen before construction can start.

"The primary expansion is going to be the football stadium seating and right now we've been through the first step of state approvals," said DeCenzo. "The second step is on October 27 with the Department of Administration for approval. Assuming approval, at that step we will then hire the architect and the engineers who will come back in with a design and a pretty solid cost to what it's going to take."

The expansion is necessary if Coastal wishes to fully integrate into the SunBelt Conference for the 2018 football season.

Matt Hogue, Director of Athletics at Coastal Carolina University, said that fan attendance must increase before Coastal can be a part of the conference.

"We have to meet the requirement of the attendance threshold that the NCAA requires to reclassify as FBS," said Hogue. "That means we have to have 15,000 people in attendance at least one time over two years. We're at the stage right now where we are in the process of hiring an architect, which will hopefully happen by early November."

With the stadium being in such a confined area, the expansion could be challenging.

Hogue said the emphasis for this project is on making the games more enjoyable for the fans.

"It's a unique project because we already have a stadium in an already confined area with two highways," said Hogue. "The architects can really help us determine the scope of this project making sure we get the expansion we really want that will make a difference to the fans."

Hogue said there are no concrete plans in place for reworking the master plan, but does not dismiss the idea.

"We've certainly talked about moving our soccer and track fields to other locations on campus with what is going to happen with football," said Hogue. "You could see some things moving and some repurposing of land in areas, but nothing is set into concrete plans at this point."

The football stadium is not the only thing expanding.

Hogue said the football program is planning on adding more full ride scholarships to offer to players.

"We will be adding 22 more scholarships to our football program," said Hogue. "This will bump the number up to 85. That will be 85 full rides, whereas right now we are only at 63 under FCS rules."

With the addition of the scholarships to the football program, Coastal is required to provide the same for women's sports.

Hogue said the program is already looking at ways to add these scholarships.

"We will have to accommodate the same amount for women's sports," said Hogue. "We've already done that to some degree by adding beach volleyball as another sport. We will be looking into other ways to add those scholarships for women. We certainly have women's programs now that we could add more too."

Moving up to the SunBelt conference will help Coastal grow as a university.

DeCenzo said he thinks Coastal will benefit tremendously from the move to FBS.

"The biggest thing we're going to gain is brand identity," said DeCenzo. "It will allow us to demonstrate a higher brand, not only associated with football, but the university itself. It will allow us to become better known in areas where there are very strong teams like Louisiana and Texas. This will open up opportunities for growth for the institution and our academic programs."

Hogue said that the exposure from the conference will create more options when recruiting new players.

"Being a part of the Sunbelt conference will open up new opportunities for recruitment that were not available to us before," said Hogue. "We will be able to look at schools in states that we simply did not visit before."

Although Coastal accepted their invitation this year, Hogue said the football team will not be eligible to play a full FBS schedule until 2018.

"In 2017, it will be our second year of the transition," said Hogue. "We will play a Sunbelt schedule, and can compete for a regular Sunbelt championship but are ineligible for any Bowl games. Then finally in 2018 football season, we will be fully eligible as a Sunbelt team."

"It started as a dream, but now it's reality. It's amazing to be able to make a difference."

Coastal, can you lift 1,000 lbs?

Adrianna Seals
REPORTER

Coastal Carolina University students and staff gathered at Adkins Field House Saturday, October 31 for the bi-annual 1,000 pound competition.

Thirty-three Coastal Carolina students, 13 women and 20 men, competed for the prize of being entered into the exclusive 1,000 pound club.

The competitors were to squat, bench press, and deadlift a total of at least 1,000 pounds for men, and 500 pounds for women, while following the rules put in place by athletics and the judges.

Dr. Jason Cholewa from the Kinesiology department said the judges were looking for a "controlled lift" and "proper form."

Each competitor's thigh had to be parallel to the floor when they performed their squat.

The participants had to touch their chest, press up, and lock-out. Lock out is when they lock their elbows while performing the bench press.

When performing a deadlift, the competitors had to have a neutral spine, stand straight up, and lock-out.

If the competitors did not follow proper form the points from the move would not be added to their overall score.

To ensure these rules were followed safely, every station had a coordinator, a judge, and one or more spotters.

Campus Recreation Facilities Coordinator, Beth Jayener, said this year's competition looked a lot different than in previous years.

"Partnering with athletics and using Adkins Field House offers the same experience as a pro-day, or recruitment day to the students," said Jayener. "To a college student who is not an athlete, it's the chance of a lifetime, so they've got to pop over here and take advantage. That's what makes this bigger and better than previous years."

Tara Josey, Assistant Director of Campus Recreation, emphasizes that this event is not just for athletes.

"It shows that athletics cares about other students, not just the athletes, while Adkins Field House allows for more to occur," said Josey.

An award ceremony was held after the competition.

The official 1,000 pound club shirts were handed out to those who lifted at least the minimum weights and then the top overall awards were given.

The Top Three Females for Fall 2015 were Destiny Garrett, who lifted a total of 700 pounds, Paige Goldsack, who lifted a total of 750 pounds, and Jenna Goldsack, who lifted a total of 805 pounds.

The Top Three Males for Fall 2015 were Darian Bates, who lifted a total of 1,195 pounds, Sean Castes, who lifted a total of 1,240 pounds, and Matt Mitchell, who lifted a total of 1,250 pounds.

Be on the lookout for Campus Recreation's next 1,000 pound club competition in the Spring of 2016.

Facebook, or any other means of communication from the school.

Travis Overton, Dean of Students, explained how the new alarm system would work.

"The system will eventually tie into the alarm systems in the buildings to provide the announcements inside the buildings as well," said Overton. "The integration will allow Public Safety officials to send out a message that can be heard indoors and outdoors at the same time. The first stage is building the towers and infrastructure on campus that will house speakers to notify the Coastal community."

Coastal Carolina University's communication office will also send information out to local media stations and update social media pages like Facebook, Twitter, and the main website.

If a student ever hears or sees a threat being made that could affect other student's safety, they should call the Department of Public Safety at 843-349-2911 or text 843-349-8477. There is also an anonymous email through the silent witness system.

Overton said that there are other ways to report concerning behaviors that do not reflect as a direct threat.

"The Dean of Students Office maintains CHANT Intervention Team that evaluates any concerning behavior of students," said Overton.

Mezzapelle emphasizes that students should never try to handle a situation on their own.

"Don't try to take matters into your own hands," said Mezzapelle. "Wait until the police officers get there and tell them what you know. Give them their information so that they can go do their job and if they direct you to get out of the area then please move away from the area."

FROM HENDERSON

Coaches Association voted Henderson as the Running Back of the Year in Class 4A. Along with football, De 'Angelo ran track in high school.

"When I first started doing track, I was doing it to get faster for football," said Henderson. "However, as I got more involved with the sport, the competitor in me just gave me this 'refuse to lose' attitude and I fell in love with it. High school was so fun. When you get to college, it's more of a business."

Out of high school, the only schools that offered Henderson full rides were Charleston Southern University, South Carolina State University, Newberry College, and Coastal Carolina University.

"I loved it when I came up to visit Coastal," said Henderson.

"When I got here, while Coastal didn't make the playoffs, they had just won a conference. So, they had a lot of things going for them."

De 'Angelo signed with Coastal Carolina in February of 2011, but he grayshirted and enrolled into Coastal Carolina in January 2012.

"The grayshirt process was awful," said Henderson. "It definitely added fuel to the fire in my goal to become a starter. When I was able to practice and be a part of the team, I was redshirted. That pushed me back another year. Basically, I was out of football for two years. I can't even explain how much fire that built up inside me."

When De 'Angelo finally got his chance, he made sure to prove to himself and the coaches and show that his two year absence from the sport he loved was well worth the wait.

At the end of his sophomore season, Henderson rushed for 599 yards and scored six touchdowns.

In 2014, Henderson ran over 1,500 yards and scored 20 touchdowns. He received several Big South honors, including back to back Big South Offensive Player of the Week awards.

"When I finally got my opportunity, it was like a coming out for me," said Henderson.

DE'ANGELO HENDERSON | PHOTOS BY IAN BROOKING, THE CHANTICLEER

De 'Angelo Henderson has been a huge factor for the running game during his time here at Coastal Carolina. He became Coastal's all time leading rushing earlier this season. Against Charleston Southern, Henderson broke 3,000 career rushing yards.

However, records and jaw dropping statistics are not that important to Henderson. When it became obvious that Henderson could break Sinisi's record, he had no idea that he was close to the record.

"It is something to be proud of," said Henderson. "I am truly grateful for the records I am breaking, but at the end of the day, we all are going for the same thing and that's a national championship."

De 'Angelo came to Coastal Carolina with star senior teammates Alex Ross, John Israel, and Tyrell Blanks.

However, since De 'Angelo was grayshirted and redshirted, he still has another year of eligibility left. For De 'Angelo, this just adds an intense level of motivation.

"Those are the guys that I signed with," said Henderson. "It just adds to my playing style. Essentially, we all been here at the same time, fighting for the same thing. Those are my guys."

We all came here with one thing in mind and that was winning a national title."

During his pregame ritual, Henderson prefers keeping to himself. He does not talk too much and puts his music on. About an hour before kickoff, Henderson goes out on the field and does his own thing, gets taped up, and continues his pregame warmups.

"My biggest goal in terms of the game is to be the best that ever played," said Henderson.

While Henderson will not be a part of the new FBS Coastal Carolina program, he did offer advice for the current running backs, like Osharmar Abercrombie, who will be a part of the FCS to FBS transition and future running backs.

"The best advice I can tell those guys is to bring it every day," said Henderson. "Different competition is better competition. They'll be facing guys that are going to be faster and stronger. Their dedication level is going to have to get higher. Even if it is high now, it has to continue to get higher and higher each and every day because the competition is going to be that much better."

Henderson graduated from Coastal Carolina in the spring of 2015 with a degree in Recreation and Sports Management. He is currently pursuing a second degree in Communications.

Henderson hopes to find himself playing in the NFL after his time here at Coastal Carolina is done. Playing in the NFL has been his dream since he was six years old.

When Henderson's football career is finally over and he hangs up his cleats, Henderson wants to work in the front office of an NFL organization as the director of marketing or deal with promotions for an NFL team.

With a couple of games left, including a highly anticipated revenge game against rival Liberty, Henderson finds himself as well as his teammates getting more and more focused.

There is no doubt that with each step Henderson takes on that field, he is 'hopping' his way to history.

theater major who plays the role of Wally Ferguson, said that he enjoyed being a part of the cast.

"This is the most realistic musical I have ever read or been a part of," said Bannister. "No one is valued more than the other. I think, in our ensemble, and everybody is there for each other. It's an equal playing field, which is also very unique for a musical."

After seeing this production, the viewer gets a sense of what hope really means.

A hope for a better tomorrow, a hope to be surrounded by friends and family who offer support and love, and a hope that one day dreams will become a reality.

TJ Little, a freshman musical theater major who plays Neal

Tilden, described how the cast dynamic worked for the show.

"We all depend on each other because there are so many layers that are put into the show so it takes a lot of trust because the show does not have what would considered a normal structured plot," said Little. "It's really just people living their lives. The show is all about relationships, so in order to have those believable relationships on stage as characters we have to develop, as actors, relationships with each other."

Coastal Carolina University's The 1940's Radio Hour, a musical about a radio variety show set during World War II, will be presented at the 79th Avenue Theatre from November 4 through November 14.

Coastal Carolina wins with a comeback

Jessica Wetzler
REPORTER

COASTAL CAROLINA PLAYED and beat Gardner-Webb University on November 7, with attendance records at 8,422.

Coastal Carolina has a record of eight wins with one loss overall and are ranked 2-1 in conference.

This was the first time Coastal Carolina had two shutout games in the same season.

"I needed a game like this," said Coach Joe Moglia.

In the first quarter, touchdowns were made by Osharmar Abercrombie and Craig Weick to set the score at 15-0.

By halftime, De'Angelo Henderson made two more touchdowns to make the score 29-0. Ryan Granger made both complete kicks to raise the score.

The Chanticleers had made its purpose of winning very clear as they continued to make touchdown after touchdown, ending the game at an outstanding 46-0.

After the game, Moglia made a few comments on how he felt the players did during the game.

He said that the offensive team played an excellent game and that the special teams have continued to be strong all year and surely held it together today. On the defense perspective, there were a few breakdowns in the first half, but majority of those were eliminated throughout the game.

"You always learn a little bit more when things don't go so well," said Moglia. "Our guys needed a game like this and I think across the board everybody played well and I was proud of that."

When calling the plays, Moglia said he simplified things.

Moglia also mentioned how he thought Michael Billings had a great game and to have both freshman safeties starting was a great success.

Having a first loss in the season and losing the number one ranking in the nation is not something to brush off lightly, but it was nothing to carry on into further games.

The Chanticleers have proven time and time again that no loss can stop them and tonight's game showed that to the fans as well.

The final thoughts from Moglia were to enjoy tonight and to enjoy the Gardner-Webb victory because when 1:00 p.m. comes Sunday, they will be getting ready to play the last home game against Kennesaw State.

The final game of the regular season will be played against Liberty University on November 19.

Buccaneers upset Coastal Carolina in Charleston

Ian Brooking
REPORTER

It came down to the wire on Halloween night at Buccaneer Stadium in Charleston as Coastal Carolina fell to Charleston Southern by a score of 33-25, giving the Chanticleers their first loss of the season.

Charleston Southern gave Coastal Carolina everything they had on Saturday night. After a back and forth first quarter, Charleston Southern stepped up their game and both aspects of their game intensified.

The Buccaneers defense held Coastal to zero points in the second quarter. The Charleston Southern offense responded to the defense's efforts and scored two touchdowns and gave the Buccaneers a 27-15 point lead at the half.

While things changed dramatically for the Coastal defense, it was just not Coastal's night. Penalties, dropped balls, missed field goals, and the difficulty of tackling Charleston Southern players made the effort for a comeback more and more difficult as time wound down.

The defense did extremely well in the second half, holding the Bucs to only 6 points. Coastal Carolina running back De'Angelo Henderson extended his FCS record of consecutive games with a touchdown after he scampered into the end zones from 9 yards out bringing the Chanticleers back within a touchdown and a two point conversion.

"I am extremely proud of our defense tonight," said Moglia after the loss. "We gave up 27 points in the first half, yet we were able to halt their momentum. Now, while the 27 points in the first half is something we need to work on, I am extremely proud of our guys and how we handled ourselves tonight. I told them at the half to not give up and keep fighting and they did just that."

Coastal's bid for a perfect season ended after wide receiver Bruce Mapp dropped a pass in the end zone on fourth down with under a minute to go. With Coastal Carolina becoming an FCS independent team next season, this was the final time that Coastal Carolina and Charleston Southern will play each other as Big South Conference opponents.

The loss now gives Charleston Southern the tiebreaker if both Coastal Carolina and Charleston Southern finish 11-1 at the end of the season.

Mellow Mushroom is the perfect combination of great food, a mellow atmosphere, and the best pizza you can find in Myrtle Beach.

Located across Broadway at the Beach, the strange mushroom building that leaves any passerby curious has turned many customers into firm Mellow Mushroom believers.

Mellow Mushroom serves a wider range of delicious pizzas, hoagies, calzones, and salads. The quality of using fresh ingredients on all dishes has been a motto of theirs since 1974 when the chain first started.

Although the great pizza is enough to satisfy anyone's appetite, that is not the only purpose for the restaurant. Myrtle Beach pizza lovers can join fellow beer lovers and create the mellow vibes throughout the restaurant.

One of the many popular items ordered at Mellow Mushroom is, of course, pizza.

Portions range from a small 10 inch pizza, a medium 14 inch pizza, and a large 16 inch pizza.

Flavor combinations are formed with many different toppings and names that leave room for a taste bud adventure.

For those with a smaller appetite, appetizers included oven baked wings, Muffuletta cheese bread, and other enticing options. Salads and hoagies are a great option for single serve dishes.

Prices range from $12 to $30 depending on what size pizza you order.

Ed Sheeran has become one of the biggest songwriting heartthrobs the music world has ever seen.

Quickly rising to fame in 2011 with his debut album, + (pronounced 'plus'), Sheeran's hit singles 'The A Team' and 'Lego House' were enough to give him a Grammy nomination for "Song of the Year." He was also nominated for "Best New Artist" at the 2013 Grammy Awards.

His success caught the attention of world renowned country/pop star, Taylor Swift.

Swift asked Sheeran to tour with her and his fame skyrocketed from there.

With his addition to Swift's Red album, it led to Taylor being nominated for 'Album of the Year' and their duet 'Everything Has Changed' was a chart topping hit.

Ed Sheeran kicked off 2014 in April with the feel good single, 'Sing.' The song was co-written by singer/songwriter Pharrell Williams and was Ed Sheeran's first major music video.

It was not for another three months until Sheeran released his highly anticipated and chart topping album, x (pronounced 'multiply').

Within two months two more hit singles were released including the beautiful love song 'Thinking Out Loud.'

His album's success gave him 3 Grammy nominations, including "Album of the Year." Sheeran lost to British counterpart, Sam Smith. The success of x, gave him the biggest opportunity of a lifetime, three nights at one of England's most historic arenas, Wembley Stadium.

For three nights, Sheeran sold out Wembley, over 90,000 seats, and also had special guest appearances from Elton John, One Republic, and Passenger.

On November 13, 2015, Ed Sheeran is set to release x - Wembley Edition.

Fans can listen to the hit CD with hit movie tracks like 'I See Fire' (from The Hobbit: Desolation of Smaug) and 'All of the Stars' (from The Fault In Our Stars), as well as other hit tracks like 'Don't' and 'Photograph.'

This album comes with eight new tracks, all of which were performed live at Wembley Stadium.

Sheeran lovers can also purchase the CD/DVD Combo, which allows fans to watch one of three concerts at Wembley, as well as see some of his best moments throughout those three days.

This album will surely bring back some good heartwarming memories and will create some new ones too.

Louis Bloom, played by Jake Gyllenhaal, works hard to break into the crime journalism scene of L.A. in this thriller.

After observing a crash on the side of the road he decides to pull over. Bloom observes another freelance cameraman on the scene and wants to find out what it is all about.

Inspired by their actions, he decides to get in on the action, goes to a pawnshop, and invests in a police scanner and camcorder.

The first crime he gets on video is the aftermath of a carjacking. He boldly walks into a local station KWLX and sells the video footage of it for $250. Once he realizes the money that can be made from this nightcrawler technique, he becomes hooked.

Bloom hire's a partner Rick, played by Riz Ahmed, to take on the streets of L.A. rushing to the site of crime scenes.

Rick is a homeless man who has grown up in the streets of L.A. He helps Bloom navigate his way around. Together they push the boundaries of breaking and entering homes and arriving to the scene before the cops.

Nina, the news director at KWLX, played by Nina Russo, becomes intrigued with Bloom's sensational type of video filming and continues to buy from him week after week.

Bloom slowly climbs his way up the video production ladder in hopes of starting his own video production company. He forces Nina to say the name of his company during the segments and makes her introduce him to all of the known anchors. He also asks for more money for his footage.

This crime thriller was very intriguing. It left me wondering about the motives of the mysterious character Louis Bloom until the end.

Ways to Manage Stress

1 Make a list

Most of the time when you are stressed out it is because you have a lot of things on your plate. Whether it be managing homework, juggling extra curricular activities, or just trying to find time to incorporate your necessary hour nap. Writing down what you have to do can help reduce stress and focus.

2 Get some fresh air

When you are stressed out, your anxiety can be a testament to one of the simplest of things, lack of oxygen. Stop what you are doing and go for a walk, run, or sit outside. Get up, go outside, and take a breath. This will do wonders for your cluttered brain.

3 Find something to do

Get something done for a class, go to the gym, or clean your apartment. Sitting around and doing nothing will only create more stress. Make a to do list and cross things off as you go. It is a very satisfying feeling.

4 Go to your happy place

Even though your true happy place might be laying out by the beach, listening to the waves crash into the shore, it is a little cold for that. Instead, how about close your eyes and visualize. Go to your happy place to give your mind a break from the studying.

5 Exercise

Studies show that working out can regulate sleep. The releasing of endorphins fights depression and boosts self-confidence. Grab a friend or go by yourself. The HTC Center is free and convenient. It can actually help with overall performance in a class.
